Rebuilding a debt-review acquisition funnel around a single customer record

COST PER QUALIFIED LEAD	LEAD-TO-SALE CONVERSION	MEDIAN ROUTING TIME, FROM 26H	DESIGN TO FULL MIGRATION

The problem

Three systems held partial versions of the same lead. The call centre worked from a nightly export, so the highest-intent enquiries were contacted last — often more than a day after they raised their hand.

The work

One authoritative record, deterministic routing inside five minutes, and a qualification event wired back into both ad platforms so they optimised against revenue rather than form fills.

The result

Media spend held flat. Qualified volume rose, cost per qualified lead fell 41%, and the sales floor stopped triaging by hand — which is where most of the conversion gain actually came from.

> “The change was not more spend or better creative. It was making one system authoritative and letting everything else read from it.”
